Compassion

Compassion

The objective is the goal or main teaching point of this week's study. If you convey one thing to your players, make it this.

Read this passage aloud to the kids, as it will be the focus of this week's study. Each week's memory verse will be in bold.

Our lessons for our older age groups are designed to be more discussion-based. This section is for the coach to read ahead of time so that he/she understands the goal of the discussion and is able to direct the conversation.

Objective This lesson will teach the players about what compassion is and encourage them to practice it.

Scripture Passage:

"Rejoice with those who rejoice, and weep with those who weep."

Romans 12:15

Coaches Guide

In just eleven English words, Paul instructs us in Romans 12:15 to keep one of the easiest commands to remember, yet a difficult one to do. Here, Paul calls us to have compassion. He tells us to come alongside those who are feeling great joy or great sorrow and rejoice or weep with them, regardless of how we feel personally.

What makes compassion so difficult is that it forces us to stop focusing on how we feel and makes us consider the feelings of others. We are naturally selfish. When you are sad, you want everyone around you to be miserable with you. When you are angry, you want to demonstrate that anger, even if it has damaging effects. Compassion means getting past how we are feeling and instead considering the well-being of others.

When we are in the same situation as someone, it is easy to mourn or weep with them. No one struggles to celebrate with teammates after a win. It is natural to weep with your family when you all have lost someone you love. But when someone gets something that you wanted, do you celebrate their gain with them? When you are enjoying yourself, do you stop to consider and commiserate with the person who is suffering?

The first step to compassion is to look at and consider others. This may seem obvious, but it is difficult to care about how others feel when we are consumed with ourselves. Once you identify someone who needs compassion, spend time with them. Celebrate or mourn with them. Ask them how they feel. Encourage them and offer prayer. Compassion is not just feeling the same thing as someone, but coming alongside and supporting others in their time of need.

Team discussion gives questions to ask your team in order to discuss today's topic. Use the information from the coaches guide to steer the conversation toward the biblical truth.

"On the Court" gives some in-game situations where today's lesson can be applied, while "Off the Court" gives examples from everyday life. Encourage them to do the things you listed during the game today.

These are some final notes/goals to accomplish this week. These are not meant to be read, but are instructions for the coach.

Team Discussion

1. What is compassion? Why is it difficult to have compassion? What does having compassion force us to do?
2. How does compassion force us not to be selfish?
3. Name some situations where it is easy to have compassion, and others that are hard. Share any stories you might have when you had to have compassion (and succeeded or failed).
4. What does compassion look like practically? Is it just a feeling, or is it accompanied by actions?

On the Court

- It's easy to celebrate personal accomplishments, but instead of celebrating when you score or get a rebound today, rejoice with your teammates when they play well.
- If you win, have compassion on the other team and encourage them. Don't boast or taunt them. If you lose, celebrate the other team's accomplishments. Don't forget that they care about the game too.

Off the Court

- Try to notice people who are going through difficult times in their lives. They might be at school, in your neighborhood, on this team, or even in your own family. Talk to them, have compassion on them, and give them some encouragement.
- Jealousy can make it hard to rejoice with others sometimes. Be sure to celebrate the good things that happen to your friends and family, even if you don't benefit personally.

The Game Plan

1. Review last week's memory verse, Romans 12:14. Anyone who can recite it to you will get a ticket for snack stand prizes.
2. Learn and memorize Romans 12:15 with your team. Encourage them to practice the verse over the week.
3. Emphasize the importance of looking out for your teammates this week. Tell them to be on the lookout for people to have compassion on.
4. Win or lose, be sure to sincerely encourage and congratulate the other team. Remember that how they feel is no less important than how you and your team feel.
